United Cutlery Brands, industry leader in fine movie reproductions, has meticulously recreated the actual prop helmet using the original movie prop molds. Close attention to detail is a top priority in every piece, down to the textured surfacing and corroded metal coloring that precisely match the original movie prop. Each helmet is presented with a wood display stand adorned with The One Ring inscription and a brass medallion. Greatest among the Nazgul was the Witch-king" of Angmar. As Sauron's number one servant, he was appointed commander of the forces. During the Siege of Gondor, the Witch-king" wore ancient kingly armor. Although rusted, as was his sword, it still served as protection. It was elaborate in design, with pauldron's resembling dragon's wings and interlocking lames that looked like scales. Finishing off the armor was a spiked helm, an elegant but intimidating design, that was as much for protection as it was to invoke fear in opposing forces.
